DINNER FOR A MONKEY.

Hembers of Gotham's Four Hundred Entertain an African Ape at Newport, R. I.

That jaded, blase section of New York society known as "the fashionable set" has succeeded in getting a new soul stirring and small talk producing sensation and for a few moments is a lap or two ahead in its tireless race and contest with ennui.

"Jocko," a long-tailed, blue-nosed, pink-eyed, chattering "monk" from Africa, the mascot of the steam yacht Taurus, was the bappy medium through and by which the innermost circles of the "400" were stirred into life and animation.

This little animal chanced to ffit across the gaze of Mrs. Stuvesant Fish

When the yacht arrived at Newport Mrs. Fish immediately began to carry her idea into effect. "Jocko" was taken ashore and driven to the tailoring establishment of Mr. O'Connor. That gentleman was informed that a fashionable suit of clothes was required for the little animal.

"Jocko" was driven to Arleigh, the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr, where he was the guest of honor at dinner, invitations having been issued to the select few to meet M. Jocko. He was given a seat at the table, and, it is said, behaved finely. The suit he wore was a cardinal colored cloth trimmed with black braid and brass buttons, cut like a Russian blouse, with belt.

SHE LIKED PERFUMERY.

They were discussing the fondness for perfumery manifested by many persons, which reminded the physician in the group of a queer case that ers to find them. recently came under his observation. to a New York Times man, "and tion that the outfit was located on while one was in consultation with Big Meeting creek, four miles north me in my private room the other of Big Clifty, Maj. "Hearing a rattling among the bottles, I stepped to the glass door and discovered the lady in the act of take ing down one bottle after another and smelling the contents. At length she got hold of something which evidently had a pleasing odor, for finally she poured some of the liquid into her hand and smelled of it again, then hastily rubbed the liquid upon her nose and portions of her face contiguous thereto, replaced the bottle and took her seat, as she heard a rustling in the inner room.

"Knowing what the result would be. I detained the ladies in consultation for several moments. By that time, as the one with the desire for perfumery sat near a warm stove, her nose and portions of her face began to turn a deep olive color, and before they departed had assumed a beautiful dark brown. She had mistaken my favorite hair dye for perfumery. Needless to say that she became an 'invalid' and was not visible to her friends for a week."

FIGHT FOR LIBERTY

Three Moonshiners Trapped by Internal Revenue Men.

The Story of a Typical Meeting of Officers of the Government and Illicit Distillers-Exciting Midnight Battle.

Standing out in the firelight, plain marks for the antagonists, Internal Revenue Agent R. A. Hancock and Special Deputy Jeff Cundiff fought three hidden moonshiners and killed one, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. The exciting midnight battle took place on Big Meeting creek, in Hordin county. Asa Humble, a young fellow just 21, fell because he wouldn't run. After the fight they found him with two empty chambers in his pistol and the weapon half-cocked. Maj. Hancock bears an ugly red welt on his face, where a bullet scraped the cheek.

Asa Humble was one of a gang that has been making "moonshine" in that vicinty for some time. A few weeks ago Maj. Hancock and Jeff Cundiff thought they had located the still. It was in a cave that opened out from the bottom of a sink-hole within a few yards of the county road. To enter the cave meant almost certain death, but Maj. Hancock and Cundiff determined to try.

They crept out one dark night and dropped down into the hole. Just the length of a man's leg down in the hole was a ladder that dropped away into darkness. Without a light and silently as possible, the two men climbed down the ladder into the unexplored cave, not knowing what as he lightly skipped in and out of the might be awaiting them. Once in rivaled reputation for getting up novel so happened that the neconshiners the saloon of the yacht and given a members of the gang, crept away moonshiners had hidden the worm and still too securely for the search-

Nothing more was heard of the "Two ladies called on me," he said gang until Jeff Cundiff got informapottles, jars, etc., in the outer apart- met him with five possemen. The Monday night, going north. It was shade, but the shade happens to be about midnight when they came into the neighborhood of the still. Creeping as close as they could by taking advantage of the ground the officers from a distance of 25 feet watched the 'shiners at work. There were three of them, and they were just preparing to stop for the night. Hancock and Cundiff crept up to 15 feet, and then suddenly stepping out into the light wih their pistols drawn. "Surrender in the name of the government!" Two moonshiners jumped back into the shadow of the cliff, the third leaped sidewise and crouched behind the worm. And then three shots rang out together. A bullet seared Maj. Hancock's face, spinning him around. Jeff Cundiff's pistol had already begun to work. As the old soldier straightened his hand went up and his 44-caliber Colt spoke out, with the deputy's gun. The two were standing straight up in the firelight, plain marks themselves, and with only the flashes of their antagonists' pistols to shoot at. For a minute it was like the sound of a corporal's squad firing at will, then the two moonshiners who had jumped back against the cliff broke away and ran down stream.

The boy crouching behind the worm only took more careful aim at the officers. In another instant the firing was over, the boy was dead.

The men who had run brushed past the guards on the lower path, taking a pot shot as they ran past, and essaped.

Maj. Hancock and Jeff Cundiff examined the young man who had fallen. He was dead, with a bullet hole through the lower part of his head. Both recognized him as Asa Humble, one of the men for whom they were searching. Next, while some of the posse laid him out as decently as they could others destroyed the still.
